CDPH ZIKA VIRUS UPDATE

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The Medical and Health Coordination Center (MHCC) continues to be activated in response to Zika virus disease. The California Department of Public Health (CDPH) and Emergency Medical Services Authority (EMSA) are currently the only Emergency Function 08 (EF 08) partners at the state level reporting on this activation.

The MHCC is coordinating with EF 08 partners, healthcare facilities and local health departments (LHDs) to ensure responses to inquiries are timely and accurate.

CDPH and EMSA Duty Officer Programs are monitoring Zika virus disease after hours and communicating with the Regional Disaster Medical and Health Coordination (RDMHC) and the Medical Health Operational Area Coordination (MHOAC) Programs throughout California.

As of Friday, 07/21/17, there have been 575 travel-associated Zika virus infections in California. This number reflects an increase of 2 from the 573 cases reported on the last situation report dated 07/13/17. CDPH centers and programs continue to monitor Zika virus disease and provide information to the MHCC related to their specific activities on a weekly basis.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

Drier and warmer weather is expected today as monsoonal moisture departs the area. A few flat cumulus buildups will be possible near the higher terrain this afternoon, but otherwise, expect sunny skies today across most of the district. The marine layer remains quite deep for this time of year, but stratus will clear the immediate coast by late morning. High temperatures will climb 2-3 degrees over most regions due to an increase in afternoon sunshine with highs ranging from the upper 60s at the coast to 105 in the northern Sacramento Valley. Winds will remain light. Friday, southerly flow will become established, which will import a minor amount of subtropical moisture to areas near the Nevada Border and isolated thunderstorms will be possible in the Lake Tahoe area during the afternoon. Expect isolated storm coverage to spread further north to include the northern Sierra and Lassen Peak and into the east side over the weekend. Temperatures may warm a degree or two each day this weekend with highs generally running 8-10 degrees above normal.

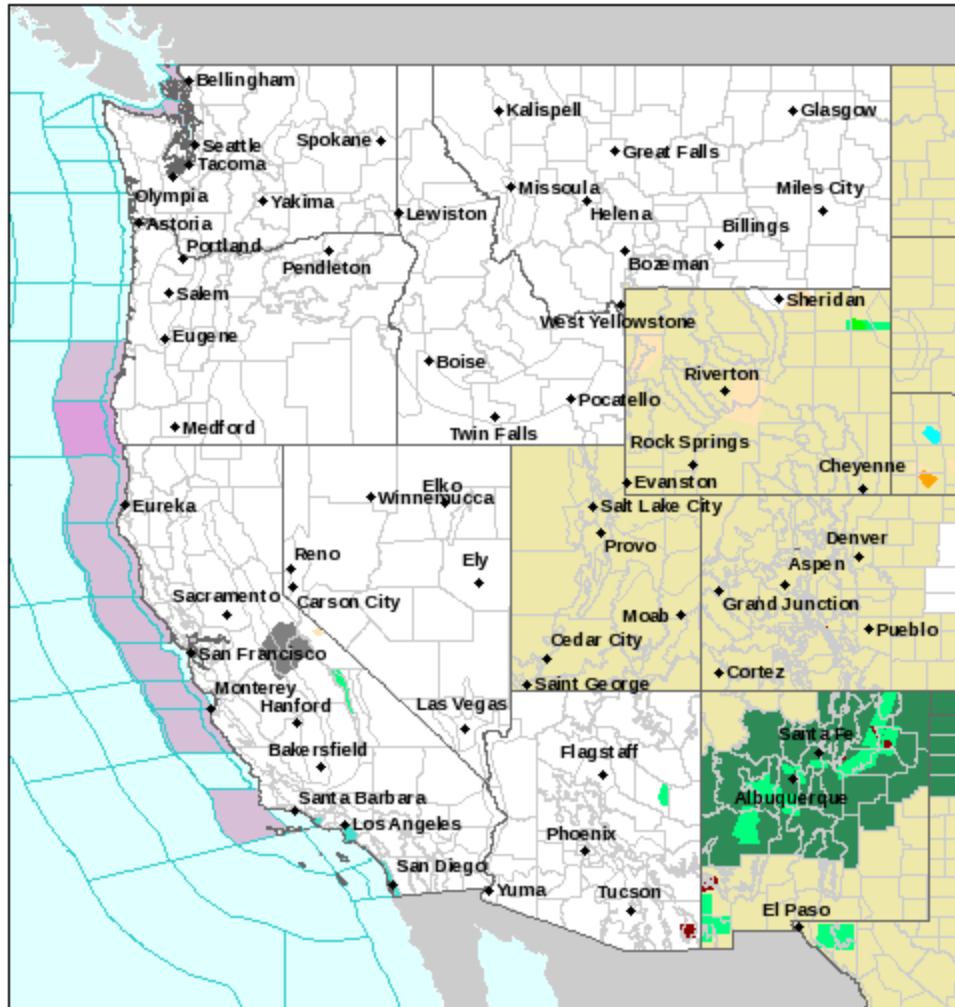

High pressure is expected to dominate the weather pattern across the West next week, leading to hot and dry weather beginning Monday. The center of the ridge is expected to be parked over the Great Basin, which should spare California from the worst of the heat. But expect temperatures to average 12-15 degrees above normal with highs reaching 112 or so in the northern Sacramento Valley. Isolated convection will still be possible near the highest terrain of the Sierra each afternoon next week. No strong winds are anticipated through the outlook period.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

A dry southwest flow will prevail across the region during the next couple of days. High temperatures today and Friday will be in the 80s to low 90s in the mountains below 6,000 feet, 90s to near 102 in the inland valleys (mainly the San Joaquin Valley), and near 112 across the lower and eastern deserts. Along the coast, little change in temperature is anticipated with various amounts of night and morning low clouds and fog continuing each day into the weekend. Humidity values will drop into the teens away from the coast and winds will generally be under 20 mph throughout the region. While there may be some cumulus buildups over the mountains and deserts during the next few days, no thunderstorms are expected. However, monsoon moisture is poised to return to the region later this weekend with thunderstorm chances increasing across the mountains and deserts as early as Saturday but more likely by Sunday. The rest of the region will have a little cooler and more humid weather along with an increase in cloud cover. This next surge in monsoon moisture will likely last through the middle of next week with a continued chance of showers and wet thunderstorms over the mountains and deserts, and possibly over some of the coastal and valley areas as well.
